Community Rounds
Bringing Community Members to Vermont’s Academic Medical Center
ABOUT THE PROGRAM
Since 1993, Fletcher Allen and the University of Vermont have sponsored Community Rounds, an intensive two-day program designed for individuals who formulate, implement, report on, or have a strong interest in health policy in Vermont. With more than 475 people participating since the mid-1990s, this program has proven to be a valuable tool for educating community leaders on the value of Vermont’s academic medical center.

Community Rounds interns have the opportunity to learn first-hand about our health care delivery system and see how the missions of patient care, education, research and community are integrated throughout Fletcher Allen, the UVM College of Medicine and the UVM College of Nursing & Health Sciences.

Community Rounds is also an opportunity for health care providers, educators and researchers to hear interns’ concerns about the issues they see when looking at health care in Vermont today.

WHAT TO EXPECT
Over the course of two business days, each intern will have approximately 20 hours of interaction, including:
- An orientation with leadership from Fletcher Allen, the UVM College of Medicine, and the UVM College of Nursing & Health Sciences;
- Clinical rotations with Fletcher Allen providers, which may include time in the operating room, palliative care service, emergency department, primary care offices, and specialty care offices such as neurology and radiation oncology;
- A research session with basic and clinical scientists at the UVM College of Medicine, looking at the latest biomedical advances in cancer, neuroscience, cardiovascular disease and more;
- A medical education rotation, showcasing the UVM College of Medicine admissions process, the Vermont Integrated Curriculum, and how UVM prepares physicians for the challenges of medicine in the 21st century; and
- A session with the UVM College of Nursing and Health Sciences, exploring its education, research, and care missions.

WHAT’S NEXT
Each year, Fletcher Allen and the University of Vermont sponsor a Community Rounds alumni event, where interns and faculty return to the campus for an evening that showcases an aspect of health care delivery, research, or education. In addition, community leaders who have gone through the program will receive periodic informational updates from both Fletcher Allen and the University of Vermont so they can keep abreast of what’s going on at the academic medical center.

“Fletcher Allen, the College of Medicine and the College of Nursing all have great stories to tell. The more members of our community that can learn these stories first hand, the better. Thank you for including me!”

Kevin Owens, Co-founder and CEO, Select Design
Intern ’12

“What I really enjoyed is realizing that everybody’s not working in their own silo. There’s a lot of cross work going on and a lot of creativity. And that’s the part that I’m totally in awe of.”

Cari Kelley, Director of Leadership Development, Lake Champlain Regional Chamber of Commerce
Intern ’12

“The level of energy and research and other things that go on give me faith that Vermont’s health care reform efforts are in good hands. There are a lot of creative, energetic people here.”

Steve Shea, President, Paige & Campbell Insurance Agency
Intern ’12

“I felt that the combination of presentations and “hands on” with physicians kept the pace at a great level. I personally came into Fletcher Allen with some hesitancy. I left with a much improved appreciation of the faculty and its people. Thanks!”

Cathy Fitzgerald, Manufacturing Manager, IBM
